SUICIDES IN ENGLAND.

An old man (85 years of age,) of the name of Ashby, of Yalding, in Kent, put a period to his existence, by hanging himself. It is remarkable, that he had carried the cord with which he committed the fatal act, for above half a century, in his pocket

On Friday an inquisition was held at a public house in Whitechapel, London, on view of the body of J. Hadley, a journeyman gun smith, whose death was occasioned by his own act in blowing his brains out. It appeared, on examination, that the deceased was a widower, left with three small children, in obscure lodgings in that court, and since peace his trade fell off, and for the maintenance of his family he took to selling oysters in the streets and neighbouring public houses; that on the preceding evening he was prevented from following business, by the street keeper, who threatened to throw his oysters about the street, and take him to the watch house. The unfortunate man, who had previously shown several symptoms of mental derangement, went home in a fit of desperation, and taking his oyster tub, dashed it up against the ceiling; then taking an old rusty gun barrel he loaded it, and placing the muzzle of it to his head, he put the breech end into the fire, on which it exploded and blew his head to atoms. The report brought the inmates to the room, who found him a corpse. Verdict—Lunacy.

A few days since, an unhappy man, named H. Goldup, hung himself, at Wye. A coroner's jury was summoned, who returned a verdict of felo de se, and the body was buried in the highway, at a place called Griffith's Corner.

CUSTOMS OF THE MOORS OF AFRICA.

The Wedding Clothes of a Moorish Lady.

The wedding clothes of a Moorish lady are the accumulation of her whole life. Amongst the articles in the Princess's wardrobe, were two hundred pair of shoes, and one hundred pair of rich embroidered velvet boots, baracans, trowsers, chemises, caps, and curtains for apartments, and many other articles in the same proportion. Each set of things was packed separately in square flat boxes of the same dimensions, and were conveyed, with great pomp and ceremony, in a long procession out of one gate of the castle into another, escorted by guards, attendants, & a number of singing women, hired for the purpose of singing the festive song of Loo, loo, loo, which commences when the procession leaves the bride's father's house, and finishes when it enters the bridegroom's house."

Singular Custom preparatory to Marriage.

The following custom in Tunis, of fattening up young ladies for marriage, is extremely curious:—"A girl, after she is betrothed, is couped up in a small room, and shackles of gold and silver are placed upon her ancles and wrists, as a piece of dress. If she is to be married to a man who has discharged, despatched or lost a former wife, the shackles which the former wife wore are put upon the new bride's limbs, and she is fed until they are filled up to the proper thickness.
 The food used for this custom, worthy of barbarians, is a seed called drugh, which is of an extraordinary fattening quality and also famous for rendering the milk of courses rich and abundant. With this seed and their national dish cuscusoo, the bride is literally crammed, and may actually die under the spoon." The same idea of female corpulency being a criterion of female beauty, is prevalent in Morocco, where Lem-priere tells us, that the women use a grain which they name el houba, which they eat with their cuscusoo; that they also swallow boluses of paste, heated by the steam of boiling water; and we recollect some other author stating, that it was a common practice for young ladies to cram themselves with rolls of bread soaked in warm water.

Marriage Customs among the Moors.

In general the bride is paraded round the streets at the head of the procession, shut up in a sort of cage, which is covered with fine linen, and placed on the back of a horse, mule, or ass, according to the circumstances of the parties; and this strange custom prevails among all true Mussulmen, from the shores of the Yellow Sea to those of the Atlantic. "The procession ended, the bride received the visitors sitting on an elevated seat, with an embroidered veil thrown over her, almost covered with gold and silver ornaments, and having rings of gold around the ancles, of four or five pounds weight. Two slaves attended to support the two tresses of her hair behind, which were so much adorned with jewels, and gold, and silver ornaments, that if she had risen from her seat, she could not have supported the immense weight of them." To understand the nature of this mass of hair, it will be acces-

Tripoli, but was undoubtedly re-echoed throughout the continent of Africa. The women brought into the streets all the brass pans, kettles, and iron utensils they could collect, and striking on them with all their force, and screaming at the same time, occasioned a horrid noise that was heard for miles." and sincerely lamented by his numerous and highly respectable friends and relatives, Francis Bernard Chute, Esq. a Gentleman of genuine sincerity, of character and friendly warmth of disposition.—Friday night, at the house of his brother, in Charleville, after a short illness, Samuel Maxwell, Esq. a most eminent and respectable Attorney;—his integrity and disinterestedness were conspicuous, and his death is a source of the deepest regret to his numerous and respectable family and friends.—A few days ago in Bristol, the illustrious Richard Reynolds, Esq. one of the Society of Friends. This venerable person was in his 80th year. He enjoyed a fortune of ten thousand pounds per annum, nine thousand of which were yearly devoted to charitable purposes. This has hardly been ever equalled in the annals of human benevolence, and the generosity is the more memorable, as it did not proceed from the blind impulses of the heart, but from the noble sentiment of duty to God and to Society. The religious community to which this elevated character belonged may cherish his memory with the proudest feelings, and boast of the honour which he has conferred upon them. He has left a son and daughter, and the wealth which he has bequeathed to them is nothing compared with the lustre of his life.
