

£159,439. About a mile distant from the city, the vessels anchor in the Pool, from which is a most delightful view, very deservedly admired by strangers. On one side is seen the new town, with the Bishop's and the Earl of Limerick's gardens close to the river, and on the other a number of villas belonging to the wealthy citizens, and a full front view of the city, the whole forming an interesting panoramic picture. The mayor is admiral of the port, with jurisdiction from the sea to three miles above the city. The domestic trade of Limerick, carried on by the shopkeepers, is extensive—the shops are handsome, and their stocks comprise articles of fashion, necessity, and luxury. The linen and woollen manufacture has disappeared, but has been succeeded, within the last twenty years, by the lace manufacture, which has become famous throughout the United Kingdom for its beauty and elegance, and in which a vast number of the young female population is employed. Limerick has also been famous for its beautiful gloves for nearly a century; and it has established an extensive manufacture in brushes, which are sent in large quantities to the English market. The Bank of Ireland, the Provincial Bank of Ireland, and the National Bank, have each a branch here, and there are numerous assurance agencies. The hotels, of which there are many, are of the first grade. Five newspapers are published weekly—the 'Limerick Chronicle' the 'Limerick Reporter,' 'Limerick and Clare Examiner,' 'The Munster News,' and the 'Limerick Herald'; they are talented journals, and, as such, are well supported by their respective subscribers.

The early municipal consequence of Limerick has already been noticed—its corporation existed both by prescription and charter. The city received privileges, franchises, and charters, from the early date of 1199, when John, Earl of Morton, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, granted it various rights and 'free customs' down to the reign of James II. The provisions in the charter conferred by that monarch remained in force until the act of the 4th of George IV, called the 'Limerick Regulation Act,' partially remodelled the powers of the corporation. The corporate body—styled the 'mayor, sheriffs, and citizens of Limerick,' consists of ten aldermen and thirty councillors, elected from out of the five wards into which the city is divided, under the provisions of the late act. The corporation holds a court of pleas of debt to any amount, and a court of conscience for adjudicating claims under 40s. The assizes for the county, and county of the city, are held twice a year by the judges for the Munster circuit and the mayor; the court of quarter sessions is held before the mayor, recorder, and other justices, and petty sessions twice a week, before the mayor and some of the civic magistrates. The assistant barrister for the county sits twice a year for the trial of civil bill cases. The city returned two members to the Irish Parliament, and so it continues to be represented in the Imperial Parliament—the gentlemen at present sitting are James O'Brien, of Stephen's Green, Dublin, Esquire, and Francis William Russell, Georges-street, Limerick, Esquire. The 'Limerick Bridge Commissioners' have the control and regulation of the harbour, and have much improved the port by extension of the quays, &c.; and the great desideratum of docks for the shipping is now being supplied. The commissioners are entitled by their act of incorporation to levy tolls on all shipping frequenting the port, likewise on all imports and exports, and they realize a revenue, from these and other sources, of more than £7,000 per annum.

The See of Limerick was united to that of Ardfert and Aghadoe, or rather, the latter was added to the former in the year 1660. The churches in Limerick are not remarkable for external beauty. Saint Mary's, or the Cathedral, is entirely of the ancient Gothic, and may be admired for its noble simplicity; it is distinguished by a tower, one hundred and twenty feet high. There are seventeen arches in the aisles and choir, besides the great eastern window, under which the high altar was placed before the Reformation. The bishop's throne, and the stalls of the dignitaries, exhibit some curious carved work, and at the communion table is a handsome Gothic screen. Besides this there are five other Protestant churches, four Roman Catholic chapels, three friaries, and six convents. One of these, called the Dominican Convent and Chapel, is deserving of notice: it is a very handsome building, in the Gothic style, and was erected by the exertions of the Rev. Joseph Harrigan, then prior, in the year 1815. The Augustinian chapel, George-street, once a theatre, is very elegantly embellished, and a fine scriptural painting adorns the altar; it is also furnished with a good organ. The charitable institutions in Limerick are numerous and extremely well conducted, particularly in the medical and surgical departments. The Infirmary, Fever and Lock Hospitals; the Magdalene and Lunatic Asylums; the House of Industry, and Foundling Hospital, are prominent features of benevolence. The 'Limerick Institution,' founded in 1809, for promoting and sustaining literature and science, is supported entirely by voluntary subscriptions. The library contains four thousand volumes, embracing classical and scientific literature, and the various reviews and other periodicals. Connected with the institution is a museum, and there are spacious reading rooms, furnished with the principal journals. Lectures are delivered by professors of eminence and celebrity, to which the admission is gratuitous. This city also abounds in institutions for the instruction of the poor, which will be found particularized in the list of 'Academies and Schools.' The markets, which are held on Wednesday and Saturday, are abundantly supplied with all the necessaries of life, and at remarkably reasonable prices. Fairs, Tuesday in Easter week, July 4th, August 4th, and December 12th. The great monster fairs are held on the last Thursday and Friday in April, and on the last Thursday and Friday in October, on Thursday, horses and pigs, and on Friday, cattle and sheep. There is a privilege annexed to the August fair—namely, that no person can be arrested within the precincts of the liberties, on any process issuing out of the tholsel court of Limerick, for the space of fifteen days. The population of the several parishes, collectively within and without the precincts of the city, by the parliamentary returns for 1841, was 63,871, of which number 53,448 were inhabitants within the limits of the city.

WATERFORD.

LISMORE AND CAPPOQUIN.

LISMORE is a market town (formerly a parliamentary borough), the seat of a diocese, in the parish of Lismore and Mocollop, partly in the barony of Condons and Clongibbons, county of Cork, but chiefly in that of Coshmore and Coshbride, county of Waterford, 140 miles s.w. from Dublin, 43 w.s.w. from Waterford, 15 w. by n. from Ballygarvan, and between five and six n. by e. from Tallow, romantically situated on the summit of a steep hill, rising from the southern bank of the Blackwater, over which is a fine bridge of stone, erected by the Duke of Devonshire, at an expense exceeding £9,000. This bridge had several of its arches swept away by a flood, which happened on November 2nd, 1853. Considerable damage was done to the adjoining property, the valley being covered with water to the depth of eighteen feet. The scenery in this neighbourhood is considered equal in beauty to any in the kingdom. The banks of the river from Fermoy to Youghal, present a succession of picturesque objects, and the country is studded with tasteful seats of the landed proprietors. The castle, supposed to have been erected by King John, is boldly situated on the verge of a rock, rising perpendicularly from the Blackwater; over the gates are sculptured the arms of the first Earl of Cork; opposite the entrance is constructed a modern portico of Bath stone in the Doric order, designed by Inigo Jones; the several offices which compose the two sides of the square, are still kept in repair. The manor of Lismore or Lismore Castle was granted by Myler Magrath, Archibishop of Cashel, and Bishop of Lismore, to Sir Walter Raleigh, at whose death it was forfeited, and purchased by Sir Richard Boyle, who highly embellished the original edifice by many considerable additions and improvements, all of which suffered in the rebellion of 1641. In 1785, the Duke of Rutland, then Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the course of a tour through Munster, held a council in the castle, and issued proclamations from it: it is also celebrated as the birthplace of Boyle, the philosopher, and, it is said, of Connewe, the poet. This magnificent pile, so long neglected, underwent a complete repair through the munificent liberality of its present noble proprietor, the Duke of Devonshire. It was an episcopal residence for a considerable period; but in the year 1363, the bishopric of Lismore was united to the see of Waterford, seven hundred and thirty years after its foundation. The trade of Lismore is very inconsiderable, but on the Blackwater below the castle is a salmon fishery of some consequence, and the river affords facility of commerce with the port of Youghal. The government of the town is confided to the county and resident magistrates, who hold petty sessions every alternate Wednesday in the court-house, a tolerably spacious building, and general sessions of the peace are held in April, July, October, and December. The corporation, which received its charter from Charles I., returned two members to the Irish parliament prior to the Union, when the borough was disfranchised, and the corporation ceased to exercise its municipal functions.
